Dimitris Tsaloumas is a renowned poet of the Greek Diaspora in Australia. He came into prominence in 1983 with his award-winning bilingual book, The Observatory. Tsaloumas is that rare example of writer who can write equally well in the language of his adopted country, and whose books have been published by Queensland University Press, among others.

This Reading will give a unique opportunity to an English-speaking audience to hear the poet read a selection of his works, in English. He will also discuss his poetry and will answer questions from the audience.

Dimitris Tsaloumas is a poet of two worlds who possesses the migrant's 'dual vision' and from the antipodes of the world 'raises his prophetic voice until it forces through and attains universality'.

The event will be chaired by Helen Nickas
